Portfolio

My works are a reflection of the everyday life of a family, the small details that I do receptively every moment of every day in my home and with my family. Sometimes my everyday is very fast, between house work and my creative work, between taking care of the children and running for shopping, so in this works I struggle with time. I stopped at these moments, which at first seem very ordinary but when I think of it, they are the essence of my life.

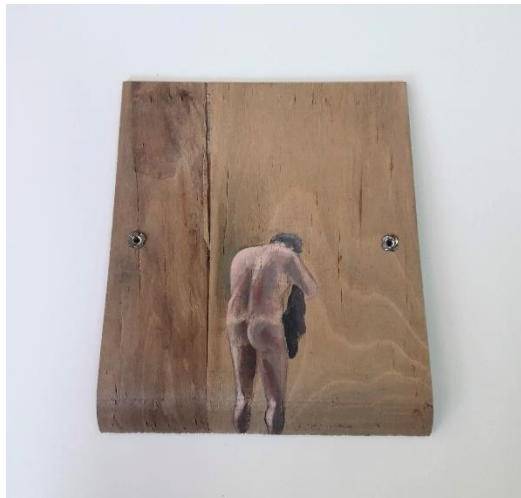

The paintings shown in this portfolio are divided in two cycles.

The first one is called Playground. Playground started precisely as a play, it started from photographs that I took in different situations and different places and after I transformed them in canvases. The models are persons surrounding me in my everyday in which I captured in their ordinary moments, at work or just relaxing somewhere.

The second one is called Roi / Amel somewhere home. The subject in this cycle are my children. I was inspired to realize this cycle when I started noticing that sometimes, when I used different objects to work with at home, as scotch, coloring papers or boxes, I used them for something practical, to do a practical work while they took them and used them as toys. Roi took the scotch to put it in his face or in his mouth as to experience the feeling of the scotch in the skin, or the big box that he uses it as his home... Amel takes the colourful flags to play...

Soul immortality.

“I’ve opened up many dead bodies but I have never found a spirit in them.” Virchow-the father of modern pathology.

Among many contradictions and disagreements on the existence of the spirit...the materia...the form which I could touch and feel...something which up to that moment I couldn’t even imagine and give a shape.
